

The jatropha plantations spread to new areas through financial assistance from the the society Petroltecnica of Rimini. The collection of seeds produced by plants serve to draw an oil can be used as alternative energy for lighting, cooking food, the production of biogas and biodiesel.

In addition, soap, glycerin, candles and agricultural fertilizers.

The project currently employs 8 people permanently.

On the grounds of the plantation was located a ground water (probably drinking) and is digging a well. The building that will be used for the storage and the equipment for processing of seeds are being completed.
